Bob:

I have checked back on this and find the following: my 15 Oct. letter was sent to what the subject now gives as her address; that letter has not been returned; neither the subject's original letter nor its envelope bore the subject's address; the address used was obtained from Personnel. The one "catch" I have discovered is that, upon giving us the subject's address, Personnel said that she had told them that the address she furnished was to be her address to which, apparently, she had not actually moved at that time. Whether she moved there before the letter was delivered we, of course, don't know. As our letter went out as unclassified correspondence we can't check on it.

The above is rather long-winded, but I thought I might as well tell all. I think she did receive the letter but just doesn't want to take "No" for an answer - at least from anyone other than the DCI.

My recommendation is that we send her a letter such as the enclosed suggested draft.
